Times Reporters

Her Royal Highness Princess Maha Chakri Sirindhorn of Thailand arrived in Vientiane yesterday for a two-day official visit to Laos, aimed at enhancing bilateral ties between the two neighbours and mutual understanding between the Lao and Thai peoples.

Her visit is in response to an invitation from Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Foreign Affairs Thongloun Sisoulith, the Lao Ministry of Foreign Affairs said in a press release.

The ministry said the princess's visit will be an important boost in enhancing mutual understanding between the people of Laos and Thailand, and furthering relations and cooperation between the two countries.

Shortly after landing at Wattay International Airport where Her Royal Highness was warmly welcomed by high-ranking Lao officials, the princess visited an ethnic and cultural school for orphans in Vientiane province where she attended the official opening of a computer studies building.

Huaphan vehicle caravan expected to grow

Souknilundon Southivongnorath

A vehicle caravan travelling to the northern provinces from December 11-15 this year should double in size compared to the previous year, according to the Ministry of Information, Culture and Tourism yesterday.

The ministry arranged a press conference to officially announce the caravan to the public. The main objective of the activity was to promote tourism sites among local people and foreign visitors or foreign residents in Laos.

They said it is also part of celebrating the 40th anniversary of the foundation of the Lao People's Democratic Republic and the 95th anniversary of President Kaysone Phomvihane's birthday on December 13.

The conference reported today that so far about 65 vehicles have joined the caravan and it is believed that this number shall increase to over 100 before December 11, the scheduled date of departure from Vientiane to the northern provinces.

Deputy Minister of Information, Culture and Tourism, Mr Chaleun Warintrasak said this year the caravan will visit many great activities relating to the celebrations, in particular in Huaphan province, which played a major historical role in the struggle for the independence of the Lao people in the past.

The caravan shall depart Vientiane before passing through Xieng Khuang province on its way to Viengkay district of Huaphan province under the theme "Return to the Birthplace-Glorification to the revolution of Laos"

Running from December 11-15, the trip will start from That Luang Esplanade in the capital and head up through Xieng Khuang on its way to Huaphan province.

The caravan group will visit the Kaysone Phomvihane Memorial Cave, the Caves of the Government Leaders and join a photo exhibition at Xang-Lot Cave in Viengkay district.

The caravan will then move to Xamneua district in the evening of December 13 to enjoy a traditional arts show by local communities in Huaphan province.

During its return to the capital on December 14, the participants of the caravan will enjoy various other activities and new experiences at the historic tourist sites in Xieng Khuang province before returning to Vientiane on December 15.

Mr Chaleun explained that there will be many great events

NA seeks power to control public debt

Times Reporters

The National Assembly is debating whether to assume oversight of government and public debt in a bid to safeguard macroeconomic stability.

Assembly Vice President Mr Somphanh Phengkhammy on Monday proposed a number of changes to the constitution. One of these would require the government to seek approval from the legislative body if it wishes to change the proportion of government debt in relation to GDP.

The Constitution Drafting Committee has suggested that public debt be kept within a certain percentage of GDP. At present, there is no regulation governing the matter in the Lao constitution.

National Assembly members are currently debating the inclusion of such a regulation in the constitution.

Many expect that a change to the constitution, which outlines the role and duties of the assembly, will receive a majority vote. Once enshrined in the constitution, this law would empower the assembly to more closely monitor government expenditure.

The decision of the Constitution Drafting Committee on the issue comes as the country is facing increasing public pressure concerning government activities that take place without the approval of the National Assembly.

City authorities, JICA confer on development planning

Times Reporters

The 4th Joint Coordination Committee meeting of the Urban Development Management Project between Vientiane authorities and Japan International Cooperation Agency (JICA) experts has reported on results so far and improvements needed.

The meeting in the capital yesterday explained the project's progress, particularly covering general and detailed land use plans and zoning codes as well as a cityscape code for historic areas.

The Ministry of Public Works and Transport's Director General of the Department of Housing and Urban Planning, Mr Khamthavy Thaiphachanh chaired the meeting which also conferred on further actions required.

In his address, Mr Khamthavy said the meeting was based on the master plan study that was jointly conducted by the Lao government and JICA between 2010 and 2011.

Participants heard further progress regarding the development of the general land use plan and zoning code for 62,000 hectares across the city as well as developments for a detailed land use plan and zoning code for 4,000 ha of the inner city.

Mr Khamthavy emphasised participants had previously agreed with the idea of dividing the urban development process into two stages - obtaining permission for land development and permission for building construction.

In addition, a consensus was reached on the need for appropriate measures and administrative tools to cope with illegal urban development and construction, with concrete steps to be taken to address this.

Based on the inclusive planning process, the project has already organised stakeholders' meetings in order to explain the project components and to obtain further support from community representatives of Vientiane.

The results of the stakeholder meetings were reported to the project.

For the historic area covering 190 ha, the basic concept for the area as well as proposals for the cityscape control and the pilot project were also presented yesterday.

The project is attempting to set up basic principles and conditions for the development of Vientiane and is seen as a very significant but also challenging step.

Participants agreed that it was important for everybody not only to have active discussions but also to take concrete actions in order to support the development of Vientiane.

Mr Khamthavy said he hoped that after yesterday's discussion the involved sectors could see tangible results and a clear way forward for each project activity.

He also asked for the continuous efforts of participants in support of the project and future cooperation with JICA experts to ensure its successful implementation.

UNFPA to employ new strategy for helping women, girls

Phetphoxay Sengpaseuth

The United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) will use a transformative new agenda and strategy for helping women and girls in the natural crisis-prone world, it was highlighted at a recent meeting.

Deputy Minister of Planning and Investment, Dr Kikeo Chanthabouly spoke at a press conference to announce 'Shelter from the storm: A transformative agenda for women and girls in a crisis-prone world' on Monday in Vientiane.

"The new strategy is important to the current global context because the new strategy can play an important role to solve the problems of violence against women and girls in today's natural crisis-prone world," Dr Kikeo said.

For many years, the governments of countries around the world have been working to solve the problems of violence against women and girls. Now, they need to solve the problems of women and adolescent girls bearing extraordinary burdens with the worsening storm of crises, wars and natural disasters, UNFPA officials highlighted.

Dr Kikeo said Laos has enjoyed a peaceful society and less major natural disaster events in the past decades. However the Lao government has sought to exchange experience on helping women and girls in the natural crisis-prone world with many partners internationally.

The new strategy is important to Laos for the protection of family and community, as women and adolescent girls can easily become victims of sexual violence, unintended pregnancies and sexually transmitted infections, he added.

Dr Kikeo explained that critical basic services like maternal health and contraception are necessary to save women's lives and enable adolescents to make a safe and healthy transition to adulthood, with their rights and dignity intact.

UNFPA to Laos representative, Dr Hassan Mohtashami said without the usual protection of family and community, women and adolescent girls can easily become victims of sexual violence, unintended pregnancies and sexually transmitted infections.

Dr Hassan said that women's health and rights are under siege when natural disasters topple hospitals, when conflicts undermine rule of law and heighten vulnerabilities to rape, when an epidemic makes it unsafe for expectant mothers to find the services of a midwife.

The report calls on governments and assistance groups everywhere to move women's health and rights, and in particular women's sexual and reproductive health, from the backseat to the front seat of the world's humanitarian agenda, he said.

The risks and vulnerabilities for women and girls in these situations are disproportionately high but the services and support available to them in crises are disproportionately low.

According to the UNFPA, the report has given us the striking fact that every day 507 women and adolescent girls die during pregnancy and childbirth in crises like earthquakes and conflicts, while one hundred million people needed humanitarian assistance this year.

New e-library system boosts health learning process

Times Reporters

Medical lecturers and medical students now enjoy free access to information on public health and medical research within the Lao PDR and also from elsewhere throughout the world.

The University of Health Sciences has been providing the E-Library services since September.

The library is very vital for students and lecturers in the health sector to upgrade their knowledge, experience and skills in the different branches of medicine. The University of Health Sciences (UHS) operates under the Ministry of Health. It is a unique institution in the country that trains medical and health professionals. UHS has consistently been trying its best to improve the quality of its teaching and learning in order to bring it into line with international standards, such as the Asean educational standards.

With financial and technical support from the Wellcome Trust and the University of Oxford, United Kingdom (UK), the UHS has been collaborating with the research unit based at Mahosot Hospital - the Lao Oxford-Mahosot Hospital-Wellcome Trust Research Unit (LOMWRU) - in establishing a repository of information on public health and medical research in the Lao PDR, called, in short, the "E-Library."

Embedded in the website of the UHS (www.uhs.edu.la), the E-library contains links to allow doctors and students to download PDF files of scientific papers and other information on medicine and health within and outside the Lao PDR.

The repository is organised under various subject headings such as diagnosis methods, health in the Lao PDR, health systems, infectious diseases, the Lao Medical Journal, Mahosot Microbiology Review, medical statistics, medicine quality and pharmacy, non-communicable diseases, nutrition and toxicology.

"The E-Library is a knowledge and wisdom source where our university lecturers and students can search for the information that they need for their professional and academic purposes 24 hours a day without limits," said Deputy Head of Office of the UHS, in charge of Administration and International Relations, Dr Bansa Oupathana.

He added that people do not need to go and sit in the library like before to search for and carry very heavy books to read - all they need is a computer with an internet connection and then they will be able to find the information that they want easily on their computer.

Students can also get access to the lectures of their lecturers without attending classes in some cases. In addition to providing the information on health and medicine, the website also links viewers to organisations with an active interest in health in the Lao PDR and these are given on the 'Useful Links' page of the web.

People can also suggest additional subjects and deposit their papers and reports, which they think will be useful in improving the health of people in the Lao PDR by writing to the email address: mayfong@tropmedres.ac

However, it is the responsibility of the depositor to ensure that the relevant copyright laws are adhered to and the University of Health Sciences takes no responsibility for wrongful deposition.

"We hope that this E-Library will be useful to medical students, lecturers and health workers taking care of patients in Laos and will become a valuable resource for informing health policy," said Director of LOMWRU at Mahosot Hospital Prof. Paul Newton. He added that it was a repository of information that lecturers and doctors hope will inform evidence-based medical practice. "We greatly encourage institutions and individuals to disseminate the information they have collected through this medium in accordance with the terms of use, which appears at the bottom of the website's home page.

during the trip because of the celebrations. "The caravan organising committees gained previous caravan experiences to improve this journey and I do believe we are now 100 percent ready," he said.

During the conference, the committee also reported to those attendees to prepare their vehicles and check everything for safety prior to departure while they also reminded people who eat meals at regular times to bring some snacks along the way because the caravan might not be on time for lunch or dinner.

The caravan has also cooperated with the military and public security ministries to ensure security along the route, while the media will also enjoy good arrangements within the caravan to promote this travel route.

Chomphet town relocated to a larger space

Mr Chan points to the new town on a road linking Luang Prabang province and Xayaboury province.

Khonesavanh Latsaphao

The town of Chomphet district in Luang Prabang province has been relocated as the old area of Xiengman where the town was located was confined by mountains and unable to be further developed.

Governor of Chomphet district Mr Chan Vannasy, told Vientiane Times on Monday evening that the new relocation site of Chomphet town is about six kilometres from the old site.

The new town was removed from the Xiengman area on the banks of the Mekong River, opposite the town of Luang Prabang district.

"We moved because there was no more space in the town for the construction of new houses as it's a mountainous site," Mr Chan explained.

Most of the state buildings of Chomphet district have been relocated and district authorities have been working at the new town site, which is situated in the two villages of Pholath and Bomlong, for a few years already.

Currently, only the district Public Works and Transport section and district health section are working in the old town because the funds for the reconstruction of these buildings in the new town area are insufficient as yet.

The new town of Chomphet district is located on a road linking the district of Chomphet in Luang Prabang province to Hongsa district of Xayaboury province. The road is currently unpaved.

However Mr Chan said it is expected that the road will start to be improved with asphalt this year, starting from Hongsa district of Xayaboury province and moving towards Chomphet district in Luang Prabang province.

According to Xayaboury provincial Public Works and Transport Department, National Road No. 4B, which links the two provinces of Xayaboury and Luang Prabang and is currently unpaved, will be surfaced with a double layer of asphalt.

The government has borrowed more than 766 million baht (over 177 billion kip) from Thailand's Neighbouring Countries Economic Development Cooperation Agency (NEDA) to upgrade the 113 kilometre road.

An agreement to upgrade the road was signed in Xayaboury province on August 13.

The dirt road runs from Xayaboury's Hongsa district to Luang Prabang's Chomphet district but is not widely used because of the problems it causes motorists. As well as having a rough surface, the road passes through mountainous terrain.

When the road is complete many people will choose to travel this way between Hongsa and Chomphet districts as it will take less time.

According to the Ministry of Public Works and Transport, NEDA helped with consultancy on the survey and design of an additional section of Road No. 11 from the Namsang Bridge in Sangthong district, Vientiane, to the Nasak-Khokkhaodor Mekong Bridge in Xanakham district, Vientiane province, over a distance of about 150 kilometres.

Southern Laos launches tourism destination brand

Times Reporters

The new brand "Southern Laos, Charming by nature", has been officially launched to promote the four southern provinces of Saravan, Xekong, Attapeu and Champassak as one tourism destination.

The event took place recently in Champassak province and was attended by high level public and private sector representatives from Saravan, Xekong, Attapeu and Champassak provinces, as well as the Ministry of Information, Culture and Tourism.

In his opening speech, Deputy Governor of Champassak Mr Buasone Vongsongkhone said "Like the anniversary of our country, today's brand launch event is about our identity, about who we are, about what we stand for."

He further stressed that, "The brand reminds us about what we need to treasure and what kind of tourism we want to promote such as a sustainable tourism which is respectful to our culture, to our environment and which helps to share economic benefits amongst all members of the society in southern Laos."

The brand was developed in a participatory process over a period of 10 months, facilitated by Swisscontact and supported by international branding expertise from the marketing agency QUO, based in Bangkok.

According to Tim Gamper, Country Manager of Swisscontact in Laos, the most important element of the branding process for southern Laos was not its output of a logo and a tagline, but the fact that it brought tourism stakeholders together from the public and private sector, across provincial borders and across business interests.

CEO of QUO Mr David Keen underlined that the brand launching event was just the start of a journey which is likely to contribute significantly to the economic success of the four southern provinces of Laos.

But he stressed the importance for local stakeholders to take ownership of the brand and to live it in their day-to-day operations.

The event was surrounded by cultural performances from southern Laos and brought to life by large picture banners, giving a glimpse of the charming nature of the destination.

A big list of media tools was also launched for stakeholders to incorporate with their own material creatively. Part of the media package is a new website (www.southern-laos.com) filled with highlights on things to do or see, as well as an area for tourism trade professionals.

Botanical experts on Southeast Asia meet in Vientiane

Times Reporters

Botanical experts from Laos, Cambodia, and Vietnam are meeting in Vientiane this week to discuss and report on the success of botanical research in tropical Asia.

The third such meeting was organised in the Lao capital from December 7-10, 2015, on the topic "International Congress on Botanical Research in Tropical Asia."

It opened in Vientiane yesterday to discuss and report the success of botanical research in tropical Asia, attended by Deputy Minister of Education and Sports, Ms Sengdean Lachanthaboun, and Vice President of the National University of Laos, Associate Prof. Phouth Simmalavong.

This meeting is aimed to stimulate North-South collaboration in the study of tropical flora. In particular, various botanical research topics will be reported at the meeting, with technical exchanges between experts, researchers and students.

A total of 121 titles including seven lectures will be given by keynote speakers, including 62 oral presentations and 52 poster presentations by researchers from domestic and international institutes.

In addition, there will be a botanical ink drawing master class guided by French experts, herbarium practical training, and a best student posters award contest, officials confirmed.

Speaking at the meeting, Dean of the Faculty of Natural Sciences at the National University of Laos and a representative of Laos Botanical Research in Tropical Asia, Dr Somchanh Bouphanmy said that this meeting has been eagerly awaited as a forum where recent research results can be presented, advice on plant conservation policy in tropical Asia can be given, and the sustainable use of plant resources can be promoted.

Dr Somchanh said it will provide valuable opportunities for Lao researchers to exchange ideas and promote collaboration with foreign experts and researchers. It will also promote Laos' botanical research as well as scientific research to be upgraded and gradually brought in line regional and international standards.

This meeting will offer its stage for four days of informative lectures and presentations, productive dialogues and networking opportunities to address some eight fields of research including: taxonomy, ethnobotany, ethno-pharmacology, photo-chemistry, biodiversity and a conservation and botanical gardens ecology database, she added.

Dr Somchanh said "This will be a memorable symposium and we are looking forward to this meeting providing a unique opportunity for sharing the latest research, strengthening the research network, and mostly pointing out new tools for better conservation and plant biodiversity and their sustainable use in this region."

According to the Faculty of Natural Sciences, the first symposium (December 8-14, 2008) was organised by the Muséum National d'Histoire Naturelle and the Royal University of Phnom Penh, gathering some 350 participants from more than 20 countries.

There were 57 oral presentations and 60 posters, and a workshop on botanical illustration which attracted about 40 people.

is available about the total extent of public debt but top government leaders including Prime Minister Thongsing Thammavong have expressed concern over rising public debt on many occasions.

In a bid to curb the budget deficit the government has cut the living allowance that was recently awarded to all state officials and has deferred a pay rise for government workers.

According to the Annual Economic Report of the Bank of the Lao PDR, which is posted on its official website, Laos' total external debt was recorded as US$5.1 billion in 2014. This is a 24 percent increase on the

The report does not provide data on domestic debt but it is widely acknowledged that this has seen a massive increase in recent years.

This is largely attributed to the government and local authorities' practice of allowing private companies to pay the cost of government-owned development projects initially, with the government reimbursing the company at a later date.

Most of the government funding involved in such schemes has not been approved or monitored by the National Assembly.

Economists welcomed the Constitution Drafting Committee's suggestion of giving power to the National Assembly, as the people's representative, to oversee government debt and safeguard macroeconomic stability.

"I support the idea of the NA having the power to oversee government expenditure," said economist Dr Mana Southichak.

Dr Mana welcomed the proposed change, saying it would allow the National Assembly to take a more active role in monitoring the government's performance.

to Laos over the years. This has helped to improve the livelihoods of the Lao people and boost socio-economic development.

On the same day, the princess and her delegation travelled to the southern province of Champassak where she was welcomed by Mr Thongloun, the Governor of Champassak province Dr Bounthong Divixay, and local residents.

A baci ceremony was organised to wish the princess well and Dr Bounthong hosted a dinner in her honour.

Today, the princess is scheduled to visit a livestock demonstration centre in Champassak province. There are plans to expand and develop the centre through a pilot project that will grow vegetables and fruit that do well in cool weather.

Arrangements have also been made for the princess to visit Pakxong district hospital where Her Royal Highness is to be briefed on a development project taking place at the hospital through technical cooperation between Laos and Thailand.

The princess will present medical equipment to the hospital and visit some local landmarks before returning home the same day.

Princess Sirindhorn has made regular visits to Laos. Last year, she came to Vientiane for the 20th anniversary of the Houayson-Houaysua Agriculture Service and Development Centre. The centre was established in 1994 through cooperation by the heads-of-state of Laos and Thailand.

From 1993 to 2014, Thailand has provided more than 236.6 million baht (almost 59 billion kip) to finance the construction of infrastructure and facilities at the centre along with technical assistance to train Lao staff and farmers.

PBM, Interplast provide free surgery in Xieng Khuang

Times Reporters

A medical team led by doctors from Interplast Australia and New Zealand arrived in Laos to provide free surgical treatment for people in Xieng Khuang province suffering from conditions such as burn scar contractures, cleft lip or cleft palate.

The programme, worth a total of US$150,000, is funded by Phu Bia Mining (PBM) and supported by the Women's International Group (WIG).

The team of plastic and reconstructive surgeons, anaesthetists and nurses from Interplast are working at the Lao-Mongolian Friendship Hospital in Xieng Khuang from December 1-10, 2015. They will also work alongside and train staff from Mahosot Hospital in Vientiane.

During the programme, the WIG provided pre and post-operative assistance to all patients, and financial support to those who travelled to receive treatment.

In 2014, a total of 91 procedures were performed, which included 33 people undergoing reconstructive burns surgery, 13 for repair of cleft lip and palates and 27 for treatment to reduce scarring from burns. The majority of the 91 procedures were on female patients. Specialist reconstructive or plastic surgery is life-changing treatment for the people in Xieng Khuang province benefitting from the programme.

Those born with cleft palates would have difficulties eating or speaking, while burn scar contractures can result in restrictions of movement around the injured area. Chairman of Phu Bia Mining, Mr Chanpheng Bounnaphol said that it is the fourth year the company has supported the programme.

"The specialist medical treatment has transformed the lives of more than 200 people in Xieng Khuang over the last three years. To mark the 40th anniversary of Laos, the company also extended support to local communities in Xaysomboun province who wished to travel to Xieng Khuang province to receive free surgery. We expect to provide treatment to more than 90 people this year," Mr Chanpheng said. He added that Phu Bia Mining will continue to support Interplast and work with local authorities to address health and poverty.

Afghanistan seeks united anti-terror approach at Heart of Asia conference

ISLAMABAD (Xinhua) -- Afghan Deputy Foreign Minister Hekmat Khalil Karzai on Tuesday called for a united and collective approach to counter the menace of terrorism and violent extremism at the meeting of senior officials of the Heart of Asia - Istanbul Process.

Karzai is leading Afghanistan in the day-long meeting of the senior officials that will finalise the agenda for the ministerial conference to be held on Wednesday.

"The Heart of Asia conference is taking place at a critical juncture when the region is confronted by many challenges including terrorism," the Afghan deputy foreign minister said at the opening session. He said the activities of terror outfits including Daesh once again remind the related parties of the gravity of the problem and demand a collective approach to tackle this international phenomenon.

"Afghanistan is determined to continue the fight against terrorism in all its forms and manifestations," he said, adding a peaceful and stable Afghanistan is in the best interest of the region.

The Afghan Deputy Foreign Minister said his country attaches importance to having strong relations with all the regional countries for promotion of economic relations and meeting the challenges.

Pakistan's PM Advisor on Foreign Affairs Sartaj Aziz told the opening session that his country desires durable peace in Afghanistan as instability there is not in the interest of Pakistan.

"Pakistan will continue to support all endeavors aiming at strengthening peace and security in Afghanistan," Aziz said.

Sartaj Aziz stressed that Heart of Asia Conference is an effective platform for promoting regional economic cooperation and connectivity with Afghanistan at its centre. He said it provides an opportunity to member countries in result-oriented engagements for a peaceful and stable Afghanistan, and a secure and prosperous region as a whole.

He said since the launching of Heart of Asia conference in 2011, the forum has made good progress towards realisation of its core objective of promoting durable peace and stability in Afghanistan. He said the key achievements include political consultation involving Afghanistan and its neighbors and the regional countries with a view to promoting mutual trust in the areas of security and economic interaction.

He said the confidence building measures identified in the Istanbul process document are leading to enhanced regional engagement and cooperation of the Heart of Asia countries with Afghanistan in areas of trade and economic, energy, counter terrorism, narcotics, disaster management, regional infrastructure and education.

Senior officials of the Heart of Asia - Istanbul Process Tuesday started meeting in the Pakistani capital of Islamabad to finalize agenda for the ministerial conference to be held on Wednesday.

Pakistan's foreign affairs adviser Sartaj Aziz and Afghan deputy foreign minister Hekmat Karzai jointly inaugurated the day-long Senior Officials Meeting.

Speaking at the opening session, Aziz and Karzai hoped that the ministerial conference will help in evolving strategy against the threats of terrorism and extremism.

World Bank warns of Indonesia's rising inequality

INDONESIA (The Jakarta Post) - Indonesia is at risk of leaving its poor and vulnerable behind as the nation's income inequality continues its rapid rise, a World Bank official has said.

World Bank Indonesia country director Rodrigo Chaves said Indonesia's poverty reduction had begun to stagnate as it had a near zero poverty decline in 2014. Indonesia's inequality level is high, climbing at a faster rate than most of its East Asian neighbours.

"Income inequality is rapidly rising, up to one third of this is explained by the inequality of opportunities," said Chaves at the launch of the World Bank "Indonesia's Rising Divide" report in Jakarta on Tuesday.

The analyst further said that healthy and well-educated children in Indonesia lived side by side with children who suffered from malnutrition, learned little when they were in school and dropped out too early.

"There are stark inequalities between regions as well. For example, 6 percent of children in Jakarta do not have access to proper sanitation, while at the same time, 98 percent of children in rural Papua have no access," said Chaves, adding that this kind of inequality dims the prospect of important segments of society for generations.

Chaves further explained that results of a national survey showed that when Indonesian people were asked to choose between lower economic growth or less inequality, more than 50 percent of Indonesians chose less inequality. It was clear to them that it was more important to share prosperity with people in countries worldwide, he went on.

According to the World Bank "Indonesia's Rising

Divide" report, Indonesia's economic growth over the past decade has primarily benefited the richest 20 percent and left the remaining 80 percent of the population, about 205 million people, behind.

With rising disparities in living conditions and an increased concentration of wealth in the hands of the few, Indonesia's level of inequality is becoming increasingly high and continues to climb faster than most of its East Asian neighbors, the report says.

A popular measure of inequality is the Gini coefficient, in which 0 represents complete equality and 100 represents a complete inequality. During 1997-1998 Asian financial crisis, during which poverty increased sharply, the Gini coefficient also fell. Since then, the Gini coefficient had increased from 30 points in 2000 and reached its highest level at 41 points in 2014.

Meanwhile, the benefits of economic growth have been enjoyed largely by the growing consumer class. Between 2003 and 2010, consumption per person of the richest 10 percent of Indonesians grew at over 6 percent per year after adjusting for inflation, but it grew less than 2 percent per year for the poorest 40 percent.

This contributed to a slowdown in poverty reduction, with the number of poor falling by only 2 percent per year since 2002.

World Bank Indonesia senior economist Matthew Wai-Pai said that in the long run, it is improved access to quality health and education that would reduce unequal access to good jobs. In the short run, more could be done to improve the skill of today's workers and create more productive jobs.

"To improve education, Indonesia could learn from Vietnam. Why is education in Vietnam achieving better results? This is because it has a competitive curriculum and the teachers are well-paid," he said.

The Team for the Acceleration of Poverty Reduction (TNP2K) head of policy working group Elan Satriawan said that in order to eliminate poverty and improve education, the government had reformed several aid programmes for poor students.

"In 2013 we changed the aid mechanisms, which were previously determined by the school, to be based on unified data via Indonesia Smart Card (KIP). The impact was quite large," he said.

Australia's opposition leader's popularity hits record low of 14 percent

CANBERRA (Xinhua) -- Support for Australia's opposition leader Bill Shorten to be the next prime minister has slumped to a record low for a Labor leader, falling one point to 14 percent in the latest Newspoll published Tuesday.

The embattled Labor Party leader recorded a third successive drop as preferred prime minister, equalling Simon Crean's low approval rating in November 2003.

Shorten's satisfaction

rating - how the electorate has viewed his performance - also dropped to 23 percent in the poll, published in The Australian newspaper, which is the lowest for any opposition leader, again since Crean in 2003.

In the previous Newspoll, conducted a fortnight ago, Shorten's satisfaction rating was 26 percent.

Responding to the disastrous poll results, Shorten told News Corp on Tuesday that he "won't quit because I don't quit."

While Australian Prime Minister Malcolm Turnbull has recently returned from a five-nation tour where he met 20 world leaders, his standing as preferred prime minister also fell.

Turnbull's rating dropped four points to 60 percent, though his coalition government still holds a 6 percent margin in the two-party preferred vote, 53 percent to Labor's 47 percent.

'Half a million students involved in gambling'

THAILAND (The Nation) - Many university students are addicted to gambling and some use money borrowed from the Student Loan Fund (SLF) to fuel their habit, a network of academics who monitor gambling revealed during a seminar yesterday. They urged officials to seriously tackle the issue, suggesting that cellphone operators be asked to help by blocking youths' access to gambling websites. Surachai Chupaka, a professor of mass communications at Ramkhamhaeng University, cited a 2012-2013 study of university students' gambling habits, sponsored by Sodsri-Saridwongsa Foundation, that 500,000 students took part in gambling - mostly football betting or playing cards.

India set to agree on bullet train import from Japan in summit talks

Tokyo (Kyodo News) -- India is making final arrangements to adopt Japanese bullet train technology for a high-speed railway project, with the leaders of the two countries set to unveil the agreement in a joint statement this week, a Japanese government source said Tuesday.

The statement following talks between Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe and Indian Prime Minister Narendra Modi on Saturday is expected to incorporate this accord, which would mark India's first high-speed railway project, the source said. Abe's meeting with Modi during his three-day visit to India from Friday will come at a time Japan hopes to regain lost ground after losing out to China in its bid to secure a key high-speed railway contract in Indonesia.

The proposed railway of about 500 kilometres will link Mumbai in western India and Ahmadabad, north of Mumbai, in roughly two hours, the source said. Construction of the project, which is estimated to cost 980 billion rupee (about US$14.68 billion), will begin in 2017, with the aim of starting railway operations in 2023.

Tokyo has sounded New Delhi out about a plan for Japan to provide yen loans on the premise that the railway contract will be given to a consortium of Japanese firms, the source said.

The Japanese side has also been considering offering a package which includes rail cars and railway operation systems, as the Indian government has been cautious given its financial circumstances. Some have called for a competitive international tender.

Should India agree to adopt the Japanese shinkansen train technology, Japan is expected to take advantage of a policy of relaxing conditions for extending yen loans announced by Abe during an international conference in Kuala Lumpur last month, the source said.

Abe said his country will ease conditions in carrying out its yen loan scheme for emerging countries in Asia, as Japan seeks to spur its economy through infrastructure exports to the fast-growing region.

Tokyo's move to review its yen loan scheme to make it more acceptable to potential partner countries is seen as a countermeasure to Beijing, which has tapped into the huge infrastructure development needs of Asia.

Competition between Japan and China over the Indian railway project has been tough as China also offered funds and technology transfer to India.

China successfully bid for the Indonesian railway project connecting Jakarta and the West Java provincial capital of Bandung in October. The project was estimated to cost 78 trillion rupiah (US$5.5 billion).

Chinese tourists in Australia outspend Brits, Americans, Canadians combined

CHINA (China Daily) --Chinese tourists in the past year reportedly spent A$7.7 billion (US$5.6 billion) in Australia, an increase of more than three times the rate of overall spending by visitors.

According to a report in The Australian, spending by visitors from China rose 43 percent in the 12 months to September, while the number of tourists from China increased by one quarter.

The depreciation of the Australian dollar, which has made the country more affordable than before, has been cited as the main driving force behind the significant rise of Chinese spending. What is more, the number is so huge that it even exceeds the spending by the British, Americans and Canadians combined.

With the rise and expansion of China's middle class, outbound travel has become a trend among a good many Chinese families, who usually choose overseas holiday destinations over domestic ones when making vacation choices. Australia, with its natural and cultural landscape, has emerged as one of the most popular resort places for Chinese tourists.

"The problem of time, distance and cost mean that Australia will never be a high volume destination," said John O'Sullivan, Tourism Research Australia managing director. "Our Tourism2020 strategy is unashamedly focused upon yield: encouraging international visitors to stay longer, disperse further and ultimately do more and spend more while in our country."

Southern California shooters radicalised “for some time”: FBI

LOS ANGELES (Xinhua) -- Investigators believed that the suspect couple who killed 14 people and injured 21 others in a deadly shooting in San Bernardino of Southern California had been radicalised “for some time,” the FBI said on Monday.

“We have learned both subjects were radicalised and have been for some time,” David Bowdich, assistant director in charge of the FBI’s Los Angeles Field Office, told a press conference.

“Did the female radicalise the male in this case? The answer is we still do not know,” Bowdich said. “As the investigation has progressed, we have learned and believe that both subjects were radicalised and have been for quite some time.”

The latest revelation in the FBI-led probe came five days after Syed Rizwan Farook, 28, and his wife, 29, shoot out at a Christmas party of San Bernardino County Health Department, where Farook had worked for five years.

Farook, a US born citizen, and his wife Tashfeen Malik from Pakistan, were killed in a face-off with police hours after their attack on Wednesday morning in a conference room at the Inland Regional Centre social services agency in San Bernardino, about 100 km east of Los Angeles. The FBI said on Friday that authorities were investigating the mass shooting as an “act of terrorism.”

National flags are placed near the building of the Inland Regional Centre where 14 people were killed in a mass shooting.

“The investigation so far has developed indications of radicalisation by the killers and of potential inspiration by foreign terrorist organisations,” FBI Director James Comey said on Friday.

The authorities, however, have no indication that the couple were part of an organised larger group, he added.

On Sunday night, US President Barack Obama said the two shooters were “self-radicalised,” as no evidence had been found of links between the couple and any terrorist groups.

Bowdich said on Monday that the FBI investigators interviewed more than 400 people and gathered more than 300 pieces of evidence to figure out how and when the couple were radicalised.

Both of them had participated in target practice in the broader Los Angeles area and one of the target practices was done within days of shooting, he said.

Besides two hand guns, two assault rifles, and more than 6,000 rounds of ammunitions, police and investigators also found 12 pipe bombs and tools to make pipe bombs in their car and at their home after the couple were shot dead during the street shootout with police.

Russian role seen in Ankara-Baghdad tension over Turkish reinforcements to Mosul

ISTANBUL (Xinhua) -- The wrangling between Turkey and Russia over a downed Russian warplane has spilled over into Iraq, as Baghdad asked Turkey to withdraw its troops sent into Mosul over the weekend over perceived pressure from Moscow.

The Iraqi central government on Sunday gave Turkish troops 48 hours to leave, calling the reinforcements to a military camp in the town of Bashiqa near Mosul in northern Iraq a violation of Iraq’s sovereignty.

As a matter of fact, the camp has been used by Turkish troops to train Kurdish and local Arab forces to fight against the Islamic State (IS) militant group since 2014.

Turkish analysts who spoke to Xinhua described Ankara’s latest deployment to the region, in which a training battalion equipped with armoured vehicles was dispatched, as a step within the framework of an agreement signed with Iraq’s Kurdish autonomous region.

The analysts even advised the central government in Baghdad to perceive the latest move, which brought the number of Turkey’s special forces in the camp to 600, as part of the counter-terrorism efforts.

Prime Minister Haider al-Abadi of Iraq, however, on Monday gave the Turkish troops 48 hours to leave, threatening to use all available options, including going to the UN Security Council, if Ankara refuses to comply.

Iraqi President Fuad Masum called the act “a violation of international norms, laws and Iraq’s national sovereignty” and one contributing to increased tensions in the region.

Hakim al-Zamili, head of Iraqi parliament’s security and defense committee, even called for airstrikes against the Turkish troops in case they remain near Mosul, Iraq’s second largest city under IS control since June 2014.

Turkey’s act has sparked a strong reaction from Iran and Syria as well, with Iran warning of chaos and regional security to be threatened.

In the view of Serdar Erdurmaz, a military analyst, Russian pressure was playing an important role in what he called the “bitter words” coming from Baghdad.

“After the downing of Russia’s jet on November 24 by Turkey, Moscow started to apply an immense pressure over Turkey in every occasion, and this one is the latest example of it,” he said.

VN eyes renewable energy

HCM CITY (VNS, ANN) -- Reducing the use of scarce natural resources through measurement of energy efficiency is critically needed to meet the energy demand of a growing economy like Vietnam, Vu Van Khiem, director general of the Ministry of Science and Technology's National Office of the Southern Region, has said.

Speaking at a three-day training conference on sustainable energy technology last week in HCM City, Khiem said that Vietnam was facing an energy shortage within the next few decades.

Economic growth and rapid industrial expansion based on low energy costs have consumed significant amounts of energy and other resources, increasing greenhouse gas emissions and exhausting natural resources.

In the future, Vietnam will shift from an exporter to an importer of energy and the level of dependence on imported energy would increase, he added.

State agencies in Vietnam such as the Ministry of Science and Technology, Ministry of Industry and Trade and other agencies have worked with the United Nations Development Program (UNDP) on labeling energy and building energy efficiency standards for appliances and replacing the use of fossil fuels.

As a result, there have been positive results in management and energy savings, he said.

In recent decades, with the present rate of consumption of traditional energy resources, energy reserves are expected to be depleted rapidly, Khiem said.

According to forecasts, by 2035 the level of global energy consumption will increase by 53 percent. Enterprises around the world are constantly conducting research to seek new and renewable energy sources, he said.

The traditional burning of fossil fuels has caused adverse environmental impact such as the greenhouse effect, rising radioactivity and global warming, he added.

Also speaking at the conference, Cho Chang-hee, principal researcher of the Korea Electrotechnology Research Institute, said that in Korea, island microgrids were being used to meet demand.

Microgrids that have helped meet increased demand for green energy globally are especially suitable for remote villages, he said. They have helped improve electricity penetration ratio and reduced petroleum use.

"Fewer CO2 emissions are the result," he said. "It also decreases transmission losses."

A microgrid is a system of multiple power sources of different sizes and technologies connected to the central grid. The system can disconnect and function autonomously as physical and economic conditions dictate.

More than 1,400 microgrid projects have been deployed in more than 100 countries, Cho said.

The conference was organised by the National Research Council of Science & Technology, ASEM SMEs Eco-Innovation Center, Korea Institute of Energy Research, Korea Electrotechnology Research Institute, and Korea Institute of Industrial Technology.

Bus fares drop as fuel price dips

Times Reporters

Users of public transport can look forward to lower bus fares now that the Ministry of Public Works and Transport has announced a decrease in ticket prices on routes from Vientiane to the provinces.

The Transport Department says the drop in fares is the result of a steady decline in the price of fuel over the past five years.

In 2011, the price of petrol was 8,500 kip per litre. At present, the price of fuel is about 6,300 kip per litre, with the price of diesel and petrol ranging from 6,000 to 7,000 kip.

Passengers travelling from Vientiane to the northern provinces are currently charged at a rate of 238 kip per kilometre, while those going to the central and southern provinces are charged at a rate of 164 kip per kilometre.

Bus fares have been adjusted to reflect the drop in the fuel price and to ensure the new charges match the costs incurred by transport service providers while being fair for passengers.

From December 10, bus fares on routes from Vientiane to the northern provinces will be charged at 185 kip per kilometre. The price of fuel is calculated to be 6,000 kip to 7,000 kip per litre based on that used by ordinary buses.

However, the price of a ticket on a Category 2 VIP bus will be increased to 20 percent higher than the fare on an ordinary bus, while the fare on a Category 1 VIP bus will now be 30 percent higher than the price of travel on an ordinary bus.

The lowest long-distance bus fare on a northern route, from Vientiane to Vangvieng, will be 28,000 kip, while the highest fare, on VIP 1 bus from Vientiane to Bokeo province, will be 215,000 kip.

Meanwhile the fares on buses from Vientiane to the central and southern provinces will be charged at 139 kip per kilometre, with the fuel price estimated at 6,000 kip to 7,000 kip per litre.

In addition, the fare on a VIP 2 bus will rise to 20 percent of the fare on an ordinary bus while a ticket on a VIP 1 bus will cost 30 percent of the ordinary fare.

A ticket on an ordinary bus from Vientiane to Borikhamxay province will be 20,000 kip per person, while the most expensive ticket, that bought for a VIP 1 bus from Vientiane to Attapeu province, will cost 210,000 kip.

Inter-provincial fares will be calculated by the provincial public works and transport departments, with the routes from province to province to be agreed by the two parties involved.

Bank deposits "haircut", Grexit off the table, Greece implements all commitments: PM

ATHENS (Xinhua) -- Greece has pushed the risk of a "haircut" on bank deposits and Grexit off the table by implementing all its commitments under the latest bailout agreement with international creditors, Greek Prime Minister Alexis Tsipras said on Monday night.

A few hours after his Left-led coalition government passed on Sunday the latest crunch test in the parliament during the vote on the 2016 state budget, the prime minister granted an interview to state broadcaster ERT.

He hailed as a significant milestone in efforts to overcome the six-year debt crisis and restore growth the recapitalisation of Greek banks this December, the third in three years.

"There is no more fear of deposit cuts and Grexit," he underlined, dismissing reports in some international media suggesting that Greece was a "rudderless ship" heading towards the rocks.

A German daily cited this week an alleged report of the German embassy in Athens containing the particular description. The report was dismissed from officials in both countries.

Tsipras attributed it to the "never ending efforts of some conservative circles to attack the government."

Amidst refueled concern over the stability of his ruling coalition after the recent expulsion of two lawmakers who voted against party line on prior actions for the disbursement of more loans to Athens, he assured that he feels "very safe" with the reduced parliamentary majority of 153 MPs in the 300-member strong chamber.

He does not intend to seek the formation of a unity government, but would most welcome wider consensus on major issues, such as the upcoming pension system reform and the refugee crisis.

IN BRIEF

New Zealand gov't deficit better than expected: treasury

WELLINGTON (Xinhua) -- The New Zealand government deficit for the four months to the end of October came in below forecast, putting the full-year accounts on the road to a second successive surplus, according to financial statements from the Treasury on Tuesday. Overall the fiscal results had improved from the previous year with the operating deficit of NZ$478 million (US$317.48 million) well under the NZ$1 billion (US$664.2 million) at the same time last year, and net debt relatively constant. Core tax revenue was up by 5.8 percent while core expenses grew by 2.5 percent over that time. The operating deficit was NZ$687 million (US$456.3 million) under the Treasury forecast in May, due to tax and other revenue coming in above the forecast.

Canadian gov't announces tax cut to strengthen middle class

OTTAWA (Xinhua) -- Canada announced Monday a tax-cut measure to strengthen the middle class. The tax cut will provide some CA$3.4 billion (US$25.2 billion) in annual tax relief to the middle class and will benefit about CA$9 million (US$6.7 million) every year. Canadian Finance Minister Bill Morneau tabled in the House of Commons a Notice of Ways and Means Motion to reduce the 22-percent personal income tax rate to 20.5 percent.

Ford says auto sales rising rapidly with ventures in China

CHICAGO (Xinhua) -- Leading US automaker Ford said Monday that auto sales with its Chinese ventures were rising 9 percent last month year on year. The Ford invested auto-making ventures in China sold more than 106,283 vehicles in China in November, up 9 percent compared to that of 2014 and bringing the year-to-date total sales to more than 990,356, according to a document posted at the automaker's website. "We are pleased that more and more customers are relying on Ford to provide them with vehicles they both want and value," said John Lawler, chairman and CEO of Ford Motor China, in the statement. "We remain committed to offering a full range of high-quality, safe, smart and fuel-efficient vehicles in China."

Iron ore demand to fall further next year

A worker at a steel plant in Dalian, Liaoning province, weighs alloy strips.

CHINA (China Daily, ANN) -- Iron ore demand is expected to fall further in China next year as the country continues to scale down steel output, according to forecast by an industry organisation on Monday.

Demand for iron ore will fall by 4.2 percent in 2016 from a year ago, said the forecast, made by the China Metallurgical Industry Planning and Research Institute. Steel production will fall by 3.1 percent to 781 million metric tons during the same period, as economic growth continues to moderate.

Iron ore demand, which may fall by 0.4 percent this year, will decline by 4.2 percent in 2016 to around 1.07 billion tonnes.

According to the institute's estimates, total steel output this year will be about 709 million tonnes, while iron ore consumption is estimated at about 1.12 billion tonnes.

"Slower GDP growth, industrial upgrade of the conventional resources-driven growth and eliminating excess, outdated capacity have crimped demand for steel and as a result for imported iron ore. The slower offtake by downstream industries, such as real estate, construction, machinery, energy and automobile industries, has also contributed to the sluggishness," said Li Xinchuang, director of the institute.

Unsold inventories of commercial apartments continue to be at a high this year, the report said, adding that supply will continue to outstrip demand next year.

The total consumption of iron and steel for construction purposes this year is expected to be about 360 million tonnes, down 7.2 percent from the same period in 2014.

Machinery industry, another major steel user, saw slower revenue growth this year due to poor demand. Equipment with higher iron and steel consumption per ton will see more output declines next year, it said. The automobile industry, the mainstay of the steel sector for long, recorded its slowest growth ever this year.

Total output for next year also does not give much comfort to steelmakers as output is set to grow by just 1 percent. With the industry increasingly veering toward vehicles with smaller sizes, the situation is not all that bright, said industry experts.

Global stocks down after oil slide, weak China trade

BEIJING (AP) -- Global stocks fell on Tuesday after Chinese trade contracted and oil traded at its lowest in six years.

In early European trading, Germany's DAX lost 0.7 percent to 10,814.51 and France's CAC-40 shed 0.6 percent to 4,728.91. Britain's FTSE 100 fell 0.4 percent to 6,202.01. Wall Street looked set for a second day of declines. Dow futures were down 0.4 percent to 17,679.00 and S&P 500 futures dropped 0.5 percent to 2,071.50.

Oil was at its lowest since mid-2009 after OPEC's decision last week to maintain production levels. That stance combined with slower global growth has left the world awash in oil. Brent crude added 21 cents to US$40.94 per barrel in London after plunging US$2.27 on Monday to close at US$40.73. Benchmark US crude gained 9 cents to US$37.74 per barrel in electronic trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange. The contract lost US$1.32 on Monday to close at US$37.65.

"Market focus at the moment is the potential deflationary effects of lower oil prices, and the signaling that aggregate demand is weak," said Michael McCarthy, chief strategist at CMC Markets in Sydney. "At some stage however, there may be a collective awakening to the immediate impact lower input prices have on profits," he said in a commentary. "The slide in oil prices is a 'good' fall in that it reflects increasing supply rather than falling demand, and this is not yet reflected in share prices."

Customs data showed imports and exports shrank again in November, though there were signs weak domestic demand might be improving. Exports contracted by 6.8 percent, accelerating from October's 3.6 percent fall. Imports fell 8.7 percent, an improvement over the previous month's 16 percent decline. Import volumes of some goods such as crude oil, fresh fruit and cooking oil rose. "It may suggest a stabilization of domestic demand momentum," said Louis Kuijs of Oxford Economics in a report.

China's Shanghai Composite Index fell 1.9 percent to 3,470.07 and Japan's Nikkei 225 lost 1 percent to 19,492.60. Australia's S&P/ASX 200 retreated 0.9 percent to 5,108.60 and Seoul's Kospi declined 0.7 percent to 1,949.04. India's Sensex was off 0.5 percent at 25,401. Taiwan, Singapore, Jakarta and New Zealand also declined.

Korea ponders options before Fed tightening

S.KOREA (The Korea Herald, ANN) -- With the US Federal Reserve widely expected to make a major shift in its monetary policy next week, ending the world's largest economy's historic era of near-zero interest rates, many in Korea are trying to gauge its possible impact on the local economy and how to best cope with it.

Yet, the job inherently falls in the lap of the Bank of Korea.

The BOK is tasked with navigating the murky waters of monetary policymaking, expected to get even murkier if and when the Fed starts raising interest rates on December 16, a move long expected and feared by emerging economies, including Korea.

The seven members of the BOK's monetary policy board will meet on Thursday, before the Fed decides, to review the current interest rate level. Korea's key rate currently stands at a record low 1.5 percent, unchanged since June, and down 1 percentage point from the past year.

"There seems to be a market consensus that December will likely be a 'no-move' month," said Seo Hyang-mi, an analyst from HI Investment & Securities, predicting the BOK will freeze the rate.

Prospects of the Fed tightening will be enough to have the BOK stand pat on its key rate at least to wait and see the actual impact of the US rate change. Besides, the Korean economy's better-than-expected performance in the third quarter has given the central bank some confidence to stick with its current stance, she added. Gross domestic product expanded 1.3 percent on-quarter in the July-September period, marking the fastest growth rate in over five years.

Look a little further ahead, however, things are not that easy to predict.

Higher interest rates in the US are feared to prompt capital outflows from emerging markets and lead to a stronger dollar and weaker currencies in vulnerable economies. How hard this will affect the Korean economy, which, according to BOK Gov. Lee Ju-yeol, is gradually recovering on the back of a pickup in domestic consumption, is an open question.

Hinting at the BOK's future approach to the US move, the top central banker has said repeatedly that although the global economic environment is an important factor, Korea's monetary policy is bound to be shaped by domestic matters.

"Even if the US raises interest rates, the BOK doesn't necessarily have to follow in the move right away, hiking its own rate," he has said.

Chung Soon-won who sits on the BOK's rate-setting board also said: "Even if the US raises its key rate, it may take some time before we consider raising our own rate unless our country's economy shows strong signs of recovery."

"The most important element is local economic conditions."

Many analysts differ in their forecasts. While most see that Korea's key rate will have to move in tandem with the US borrowing rates, they differ in the details, including the timing and scope of a rate change.

And there are economists like Kwon Young-sun at the Hong Kong-based Nomura International, who predicts two rate cuts in Korea next year.

"The BOK is expected to lower the policy rate to 1 percent by the end of next year," Kwon said.

Lao stock market report

BCEL-KT

Trade Summary

December 8 was a cloudy day for the Lao stock market as two listed stocks took a big hit, dragging the index down by as much as 24.69 points to 1,208.73 points. The decrease was supported by low demand for all stocks, accompanied by a low-price selloff of EDL-Gen. The market saw just 17,724 shares in terms of trading volume.

The market heavyweight, EDL-Gen, dropped 150 kip to facilitate the selling of 5k shares at the market closing, leaving no demand for the blue-chip of the LSX for the day. The total trading volume for the stock was 14,080 shares.

One good thing for the day was the pickup of BCEL as it added 100 shares to the market price. Still, the exchange of shares was not something impressive. In the meantime, LWPC lost 100 kip to 7,500 kip, while PTL stayed still at 3,000 kip.

CAB Cakaran plans to set up Indonesian poultry joint venture

Newly hatched chicks at CAB's hatchery incubator in Penang.

KUALA LUMPUR (The Star, ANN) -- Integrated poultry producer CAB Cakaran Corp Bhd plans to set up a fully integrated poultry business in Indonesia and has signed a Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) with Salim Group, one of Indonesia's largest conglomerates.

In a filing with Bursa Malaysia on Monday, the company said it and Salim Group's investment holding company KMP Private Ltd would study the possibility of having a joint venture, in which a Salim Group special purpose vehicle would initially hold 90 percent and CAB 10 percent.

"However, CAB will have the option to increase its shareholding percentage up to 30 percent in the next three years' time after the initial setup, depending on its financial condition," it said. CAB said the cost of investment could not be forecast at this time.

The MoU is valid for 12 months from the date of its signing (December 6) or until the execution of the valid joint venture agreement, whichever comes earlier.

CAB, the largest poultry company in the peninsula's northern region, currently has 10 breeder farms and 140 broiler farms throughout Peninsular Malaysia. It produces 4.2 million broiler birds per month currently, 20 percent higher than the 3.5 million birds produced monthly last year.

The sweetest thing

Chusri Ngamprasert

THAILAND (The Nation) -- One of Thailand's most popular tourist destinations, Phuket is known for its sparkling clear waters, white sand, accommodation to suit most pockets and, of course, its seafood.

Now it has another attraction, one that will have gourmets salivating - an organic sweet corn farm that allows you to taste the goodies on site.

Spread over 45 rai of land in the island's Muang district, Vanich Farm is run by Apirag Vanich, chief executive of the Vanich Group.

"Sweet corn had never been grown on Phuket until I introduced it in 2010. The idea for developing the farm came to me during a visit to Nakhon Ratchasima. I love corn and thought that my fellow islanders would also enjoy nibbling on freshly picked corn grown organically," he says.

Apirag has taken his dream of corn farming in the city much further and today Vanich Farm is also a learning centre and an agricultural lifestyle tourism destination.

A shopping area is located around the entrance with a small selection of shops offering more than 1,000 items. There's an ice-cream parlour with cones and cups selling corn ices and a fresh market selling corn milk, corn silk tea, popcorn and corn on the cob. A souvenir shop has premium OTOP products from the island as well as from other southern provinces.

There are corners with cool props for photos but they all fade into the background as visitors spot the sheep, miniature cows and rabbits.

"I've never focused on making a profit. My aim is to produce food that is tasty and safe while creating a sustainable environment.

"When I was young, Phuket was a beautiful place. It was full of greenery. Hotels and other buildings have mushroomed over the last 30 to 40 years and that greenery has been severely eroded. I am trying to bring nature back to downtown Phuket so our younger generation can learn about nature and, I hope, preserve it.

"It's heartbreaking to see so many vegetables and fruits in the markets that are not safe to eat. That's why I focus on chemical-free farming. I am lucky to have the help of corn guru Surapol Chowchong and organic farming expert Uthai Ganlom," he says.

Visitors are welcome to walk through the four large fields of corn and sunn hemp or climb into an electric-powered cart to the traditional Thai house that borders the rice paddies to take photos of the albino buffaloes and kids dressed in old-style attire.

"The sunn hemp has beautiful yellow flowers but our main reason for growing it here is to use them as green manure to improve and protect the soil," agronomist Surapol explains.

"Kids these days have no idea where their food comes from. They don't know that it takes time to grow rice and vegetables. They just know the food comes in plastic bags and is sometimes ready to eat straight out the packet. They can't tell the difference between kraprao (Holy Basil), horapha (Thai Sweet Basil) and maenglak (Lemon Basil). This learning centre allows them to see the plants, touch them and smell their different aromas before they are cooked and put on the dining tables," adds Uthai, a farmer from Nakorn Ratchasima who looks after the organic rice paddy and garden in the farm.

The main building is an airy, two-storey construction covered with brown cedar shingles that's designed to mimic the shape of a large corn husk. From here, you can admire the farm in all its glory, enjoy cold corn milk, tuck into fine dishes or sip the farm's signature drink, a cocktail in which the main ingredient is the South Korean favourite soju. It's mixed with domestic organic fruits and vegetables from the farm including corn, mulberry, pandanus leaf and pineapple.

A free-form split-level tree house stands along side. Ten metres tall, it is designed by architects from Studio Miti and is covered with a giant net made from pine lumber. It will soon be used as an exclusive dining venue for parties of four, who will be served a meal from the famous Thai restaurant Nara that will open in the main building.

An emotional return home

Ms Sorn is one of the human trafficking victims.

“I missed you my beloved daughter, said my mother as I ran into her arms, tears streaming down my face,” Sorn (not her real name) shares.

“Every day, I had to sell cucumbers, pineapples and vegetables for my traffickers. I worked in Thailand for 3 years without work permits and pay. I worked from 7am to midnight every day for 3 years. No days off and no free time. At 11pm every night, I would be given my only meal of the day,” she says.

“Returning home brought a warm feeling within me and gratefulness to be able to see my mother and family again,” Sorn says.

“My father hadn’t allowed me to leave. I asked both my parents’ permission when I was 16, but they refused. When my father went to tend to the cows, I left with my friends for the border and crossed with the hope of working to help my family’s condition. We were poor, with barely enough rice to eat and a home that was falling apart; I wanted to help. The broker I met told me I would receive a good salary that would help my family become better. However in the end, I was found with a broken dream, no way to help my family and in trouble,” Sorn says.

“My cousin and I were asked to deliver vegetables to a nearby building when we decided to escape. We approached the police for help and they sent us to KorKed Centre for a year, a place for human trafficking survivors to learn valuable skills, before going back to Laos,” Sorn shares.

Now 21-years-old, she is completing grade 4 of primary school in the province of Saravan.

Sorn is also one of the participants who joined the trafficking prevention programmes.

“This event was a great success for human trafficking survivors. Such an event builds awareness, teaches them how to protect themselves and helps them identify their strengths and weaknesses. The lessons they have learned from this event will help them succeed in society and hopefully allow them to learn and improve,” said Mr Thongphone Oudanith, deputy office of the Savannakhet Provincial Labour and Social Welfare Department.

“I was very happy and grateful to join the human trafficking survivors’ events in the province of Savannakhet. It was the first time I got to join activities like this and meet other people from different places that were facing the same problem. It made me feel good. I will use the lessons learned from these activities in my daily life and share with my friends,” Sorn says with hope.

“I have learned about the dangers of human trafficking, from the dangers of working without the right documentation to recognising signs of abuse from employers who refuse to pay employees,” she says.

Sorn recently finished taking sewing classes at Village Focus with all the sewing materials necessary to set up a small business in her home.

“I would like to thank my sponsor who helped and supported me. I will try my best to make a better life for myself and make my dreams come true,” she added.

Child protection and participation are central to World Vision’s work as a child-focused organisation. The legal framework in Laos supports both child protection and child participation. Laos became a signatory to the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child in 1991, and National Decree Number 4 (2007) provides for the Protection of the Rights and Interests of Children.

World Vision actively works with its partners to protect children throughout the country. According to a recent Lao Social Indicator Survey (2012), 76 percent of children have experienced violent discipline and hundreds of children continue to be victims of exploitative labour and human trafficking.

World Vision Laos is working towards systemic change, which requires both changes in community behaviours and institutional strengthening. International, an NGO that works with vulnerable communities to give them valuable skills and knowledge to be independent. World Vision provided Sorn

What are your thoughts on the amendments to the constitution?

The National Assembly opened its ongoing ordinary session on Monday, with the meeting scheduled to end on December 25. Lawmakers are debating amendments to the constitution and Vientiane Times asked various NA members for their opinion on the need for these changes.

Times Reporters

Mr Khamdeng Kommadon, President of the Xekong Lao Front for National Construction and NA member for Xekong province: It's great that we're getting together again at the National Assembly to discuss the problems we have in Laos and how we can resolve them. This time we're debating changes to the constitution. This is the third time we've held these talks. We're having in-depth discussions because these issues are very important for our country as the constitution is the basis of our laws. As Laos changes and develops, so the constitution must be amended. This is especially important with the coming of the Asean Economic Community (AEC) and globalisation. When the constitution is amended, some laws must be changed so that certain situations and the regulations governing them are compatible. NA members are sharing their ideas, especially on important parts of the constitution as it will govern our development process.

Mr Vankham Inthachack, President of the Savannakhet Lao Front for National Construction and NA member for Savannakhet province: The constitution is the basis of our legal system and governs all our activities. It needs to be amended because Laos is developing and the people need a stronger constitution that reflects the changing circumstances. The constitution is at the heart of everything we do so NA members are sharing their ideas on amendments and additions to laws that have been in existence for over 40 years. Many things have to be changed so that we can integrate with the AEC and the rest of the world, and make it easier for us to mitigate and resolve problems. If we create a revised constitution and ensure that it works well, we can be confident that our laws are effective. The authorities should publicise the content of the new constitution to people around the country and make sure everyone understands it, so that it has public support.

Mr Bounthien Thongkeo, Head of the Nongnokkhan International Border Checkpoint and NA member for Champassak province: We've been talking about these changes for a long time and everyone has voiced their opinion. We need agreement from everyone involved so that we embark on a path that will foster development. Changes to the constitution are important because they are the foundation of government and will underlie the development process. Any country will move forward and enjoy peace if it has a solid constitution as it will steer the nation in the right direction.

Mr Simoun Ounlasy, Vice President of the Lao Trade Union and NA member for Savannakhet province: It's important that we amend the constitution as it should be as useful as possible and agreed to by almost everyone. We want to rewrite some of the laws that need updating because many things are changing, especially as we prepare to join the AEC. To promote the new constitution, we should make sure the general public understands it and complies with it. In the past people have been fairly law abiding but not completely as some people didn't fully understand the laws.

Associate Professor Dr Bounpong Keorodom, Acting Rector of Savannakhet University and NA member for Savannakhet province: It is very important to amend the constitution because there have been a lot of changes, both in society and in terms of economics. The constitution has not been changed a lot. Some articles have been added but not many things have changed. We amended some of the articles to make improvements and have made changes to about 20 percent. This has been done because we want everything in Laos to run smoothly and ensure that we are in a strong position to compete with other countries.

The Lao PDR celebrates 40 years in grand style

Editorial Desk

The Lao people can be justifiably proud of the widespread and meaningful celebrations to mark 40 years of the Lao PDR and the nation's great achievements on the road to development.

The historic event took place amid reverence and solemnity on December 2 in the nation's capital of Vientiane. Tens of thousands of people attended, including Lao citizens, foreign guests and people of Lao origin now living overseas.

The programme of activities staged for the giant ceremony featured Lao and foreign musical shows, a wonderful parade involving 15,000 people, the official ground-breaking ceremony for the high speed Laos-China railway, and a colourful artistic event featuring 4,000 people and firework displays.

Speaking at the parade, which took place at the That Luang esplanade, Secretary General of the Lao People's Revolutionary Party and President of the Lao PDR Choummaly Sayasone said "Today, we together with our Lao compatriots of all ethnicities to mark the 40th anniversary of the establishment of the Lao PDR. When we look back at the 40 years that have passed since December 2, 1975, it is with great pride that we remember how the Congress of People's Representatives, which represented the aspirations of the entire Lao population, agreed to proclaim the establishment of the Lao PDR, finally erasing the feudal and colonial regimes that had occupied Laos for so many years."

"The proclamation of the Lao PDR was the fruit of the democratic national revolution that took place for many years under the great and capable leadership of the Party. It was a victory for the solidarity of the masses and the unity of our army and people, which enhanced the tradition of ardent patriotism, as well as the valiant and brave struggle of our nation."

"During 40 years of protection and development by the new regime under the leadership of the Party, our country has headed firmly towards its targeted destination. This makes us proud, as in no era before has our beloved country been so peaceful, developed or progressive, or enjoyed the status it does today in the regional and international arena," he added.

The magnificent ceremony was put on to mark this noteworthy occasion, which took place in an atmosphere of joy as people all across the country marked the achievements made in national development and protection.

Every sector and every community throughout the country actively took part in the celebrations, either by attending parades, watching or participating in a show, or helping out with security.

The celebrations enabled the people of Laos and the world to appreciate the scale and fruitfulness of development under the leadership of the Lao People's Revolutionary Party over the past four decades. Economic infrastructure has constantly improved and poverty has been addressed step by step. The government spent a large sum of money on the celebrations to ensure they were praiseworthy and successful.

The sectors involved worked hard on the preparations, including rehearsals, decorations and security, in order to achieve an outstanding result. We should offer them our thanks for carrying out this huge task.

The night before the parade, students, officials and other participants were encouraged to gather and sleep in schools, government offices and ministries to ensure they were ready to transport people to the site of the parade early the next morning.

This was yet another demonstration of the solidarity and unity of the Lao people in serving their country. It was a great opportunity for a large number of people to take part in these activities and it was a day for everyone involved to remember.

On the day itself, crowds turned out to watch the wonderful parades at the That Luang esplanade and in the evening there was an amazing show at the National Sports Complex. At night, people gathered to enjoy stunning fireworks displays at the That Luang esplanade and the sports complex, which aptly reflected the success of the whole celebrations.

The celebrations were conducted in a peaceful and orderly manner throughout the country and the magnificent fireworks displays were a fitting end to this long-anticipated event.

Following the celebrations in Vientiane all of the provinces also organised heartfelt events to mark the occasion, including Borikhamxay, Champassak, Savannakhet and Luang Prabang. The celebrations that took place in Luang Prabang province coincided with events staged by the authorities to mark the 20th anniversary of Luang Prabang as a UNESCO World Heritage Site.

Benefits of Trans-Pacific Partnership and issues to look out for

Anwar Nasution

JAKARTA (The Jakarta Post) -- Indonesia should join the Trans-Pacific Partnership (TPP) as a way to promote structural reform.

Such reform would include restructuring state-owned enterprises (SOEs), improving the investment climate, improving economic efficiency and productivity to create jobs for the nation's surplus labor and promoting exports. The spectacular experience of East Asia indicates that East Asian countries have become more developed and prosperous during the past 60 years mainly due to their greater penetration into international markets through trade and incoming private investment.

The People's Republic of China (PRC), which started deregulating its economy in 1978, 12 years after Indonesia in 1966, has grown much faster than Indonesia. Its currency, the renminbi (RMB), is now an elite international currency and a member of the International Monetary Fund's special drawing rights. During Mao Zedong's years, nobody held the RMB as a store of value.

By contrast, our rupiah moves like a yo-yo and it is very much affected by short-term capital flows.

Using Mao Zedong's terminology, Deng Xiaoping adopted "capitalist roaders" by inviting foreign direct investment (FDI), owned by foreign capitalists, to create job opportunities for China's labour surplus, to modernise the economy and to promote the export of agricultural and manufacturing products. Starting as a poor country with assembly plants to produce cheap and low quality industrial goods and products, China's gross domestic product (GDP) is now bigger than the GDP of Japan and its export value is the second biggest in the world after Germany. The country is the biggest recipient of FDI among emerging economies and is now a major military power in the Asia Pacific.

FDI brings in not only capital but also skills and technology as well as networks of international markets. Severe international market competition forced companies in China to increase efficiency, reduce costs, move to higher value-added products and upgrade the quality of production. Because of these trends, the PRC now exports its own telecommunications sets, computers, aircraft, high-speed locomotives and nuclear generating plants. Indonesia, on the other hand, remains a producer and exporter of unprocessed raw materials and a borrower from China.

Unlike in Singapore, SOEs in Indonesia still demand capital injections from the government.

Because of limited job opportunities at home, Indonesia exports its uneducated and low-skilled labour surplus all over the world. Other options for the unemployed are to work in the non-formal sector, such as peddlers and ojek (motorcycle taxi) drivers with very low productivity.

The objective of America's TPP trade agreement is to achieve "free and open trade and investment" in the Asia Pacific. Such an objective mimics the ambitions outlined in the Bogor Goals crafted in an Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation forum 20 years ago. The TPP now has 12 member countries but is largely a free trade agreement between two big countries, the US and Japan. Trade between these two economic giants accounts for about 60 percent of the TPP's economic benefits.

What the Lao papers say

Police continuing to tackle social problems

Translated by Times Reporters

Groups of youths are continuing to ride motorbikes recklessly and disturbing society so police are disseminating traffic regulations to students at many schools around Vientiane.

Recently, police organised to spread the information in Nongbone and Xaysettha Secondary Schools and will continue their efforts at many lower and higher secondary schools around the capital.

Deputy Head of Vientiane Traffic Police Department, Major Sangkhom Phommalat said that police were not only distributing traffic regulations to students but also urging them not to join groups of youths on motorbikes involved in antisocial behaviour.

Police also encouraged students to help protect the peace and order of society. Police said they would use strict measures to punish anyone who did not respect the law.

Police are also increasing efforts to solve traffic problems and prevent crime in society.

--Vientiane Mai Daily, December 3

Everyone should take responsibility to clean up rubbish

Many people are still not taking responsibility for their actions and throwing rubbish everywhere. This has to stop if we want to make the city clean and tidy.

One reader called in about one littering incident near Talat Sao Shopping Mall. Although the amount of rubbish was not that much the concerned officials need to solve this problem as the mall is a key tourist area in Vientiane.

This problem is the result of people not putting garbage in the bin or that the cleaners did not properly clean up the area. Either way it has clean to attract tourists.

Cleaning-up will mean the city is tidy with fresh air and a good environment and many people will want to come and visit, in the opinion of a Pasaxon Van-Athit reader.

Everyone must contribute to cleanliness and not litter to solve this problem.

--Pasaxon Van-Athit Weekly, November 6

Modified motorbikes causing social disturbance

Many youths in Vientiane province are still using modified motorbikes to cause social disorder so all concerned officials are working hard to solve this.

To tackle the problem traffic police of Phonhong district, Vientiane province have organised random checks on modified motorbikes.

Phonhong district traffic police reported they recently instigated checks along many roads around the community and at schools and have seized 18 modified motorbikes and re-educated the motorcyclists.

Traffic police urged owners not to modify their motorbikes because it breaks the law and increases the risk of road accidents.

Modified motorbikes also disturb other people, especially bikes with loud exhausts involved in illegal street racing.

Sepp Blatter at risk again from FIFA kickbacks scandal

GENEVA (AP) -- Sepp Blatter is at risk again from the World Cup bribery scandal that tainted much of his FIFA presidency.

Switzerland's justice ministry confirmed on Monday that American authorities formally asked for files in the ISL kickbacks case to aid their sprawling investigation of alleged racketeering by international soccer leaders.

The ISL marketing agency was found to have routinely bribed top sports officials, including Blatter's predecessor Joao Havelange, before collapsing into criminal bankruptcy in 2001.

British broadcaster the BBC aired a programme Monday alleging it had seen a letter obtained by the FBI that was written by Havelange and said Blatter had "full knowledge" of kickback payments in the 1990s. Blatter was Havelange's general secretary for 17 years until becoming president in 1998.

Blatter would not comment on the BBC's claim, his spokesman Klaus Stoeckli told The Associated Press on Monday.

FIFA said it is cooperating to provide "all relevant information" to ongoing American and Swiss investigations, and would not comment on specific allegations.

The ISL case sent FIFA into financial crisis, then dogged the governing body and Blatter through a criminal trial of six agency executives in 2008. A legal fight followed as FIFA tried to keep sealed the identity of officials named in a settlement deal to repay bribes.

Two years ago, FIFA finally declared the case closed after its ethics committee reviewed the case.

The ethics judgment confirmed three longtime executive committee members as bribe-takers: Havelange, who was FIFA president from 1974-1998, resigned as honorary president; his former son-in-law Ricardo Teixeira of Brazil, who had resigned a year earlier; and Nicolas Leoz of Paraguay, who resigned as president of the South American confederation CONMEBOL.

Criticising Havelange and Teixeira for "morally and ethically reproachable" conduct, the ethics ruling of April 2013 also noted that commercial bribery was not illegal in Switzerland in the 1990s.

And Blatter's behaviour over the years did not amount to "any criminal or ethical misconduct," ethics judge Joachim Eckert wrote.

Blatter had been merely "clumsy," Eckert said, when in March 1997 he sent back a payment of 1.5 million Swiss francs (then US$1 million) which arrived at FIFA for Havelange from ISL.

Being cleared of misconduct was a relief to the FIFA president, FIFA secretary general Jerome Valcke told the AP days after the ruling was published. The name ISL that was "tattooed on his forehead" for more than a decade was washed away from Blatter by the ethics panel's summary, Valcke said in May 2013 in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia.

Athletics Federation to hold more track and field events

Sangkhomsay Bupphanouvong

The Lao Amateur Athletics Federation will be ready to host 18 track and field events at the upcoming 1st Lao National University Games in Vientiane in March next year.

The Lao National University Games will be hosted by the National University of Laos (NUOL) while the Lao Athletics Federation will provide the sporting equipment for the track and field events at NUOL's Dongdok campus.

Secretary of the Lao Amateur Athletics Federation, Mr Sitthixay Sakpaseuth said the NUOL will check and improve the stadium again before hosting the track and field events.

Teams from a number of provinces, the University of Health Sciences, Police Academy, Army Academy, Banking Institute and the hosts

NUOL are expected to field athletics teams for the games.

The provincial universities in Luang Prabang, Savannakhet and Champassak provinces are expected to field athletics teams, as are private colleges from other provinces nationwide.

Mr Sitthixay said next month, the provinces and other teams will be able to register at the federation's office before attending the games.

He said national athletes will be able to attend the 1st games if they are currently studying at a university. However national athletes will be unable to compete in the games if they have already graduated from university.

The first National University Games will include football, badminton, table tennis, sepak takraw, petanque, taekwondo, volleyball, and beach volleyball.

During competition at the 1st games, the Athletics Federation will select the best athletes to represent the NUOL to compete in the Asean University Games in Singapore in June 2016.

The federation has over 10 athletes who can compete at the national level. They previously competed at the 10th National Games in Oudomxay province in 2014 and also the 2014 Asean University Games in Indonesia.

Laos came away empty-handed in the athletics events at the 28th SEA Games in Singapore and won only two bronze medals in track and field at the 27th SEA Games in Myanmar.

At the 16th Asean University Games held in Vientiane in 2012 the Lao athletes secured four bronze medals in the track and field events.

At the 26th SEA Games in Indonesia, Laos failed to win any medals but won a bronze at the 25th SEA Games in 2009. At the 15th Asean University Games in 2010, Laos won one silver and five bronze medals.

Everton rescues 1-1 draw against Crystal Palace in EPL

LIVERPOOL, England (AP) -- Romelu Lukaku scored his 50th goal for Everton in his 100th appearance to give the team a 1-1 draw against Crystal Palace on Monday in the Premier League.

Lukaku hit the woodwork twice before Gerard Deulofeu found him with a low cross in the 81st minute and the Belgium striker had a simple tap-in from close range for his seventh goal in six matches.

In an entertaining second half, Scott Dann headed Crystal Palace into the lead in the 76th minute after poor marking by Everton from a corner.

Lukaku nearly leveled immediately but thumped a shot against the crossbar, having struck the post with a low effort in the first half.

Palace is sixth on 23 points from 15 games, with Everton a point back in ninth place.

Watson wins World Challenge by 3 shots

NASSAU, Bahamas (AP) -- A few years after Bubba Watson made it onto the PGA Tour, he started waking up early to play practice rounds with Tiger Woods. He didn't ask a lot of questions of the world's No. 1 player who already had 14 majors when he was 32.

"I learn by watching and listening," Watson said. "So I just watched. How would you not want to learn from the best player of our generation?"

Woods, the tournament host, was watching Sunday as Watson delivered a performance that looked familiar in its efficiency.

Staked to a two-shot lead going into the final round, Watson made four birdies in seven holes and was never seriously challenged. He sailed home to a 6-under 66 and a three-shot victory over Patrick Reed at Albany Golf Club in the Hero World Challenge.

Watson wasn't even planning to play this week. He turned down his invitation a few months ago because he didn't have a passport for his newly adopted daughter, Dakota. But when PGA champion Jason Day backed out to stay home with his newborn daughter, Watson's wife was able to expedite all the right documents for the family to come over to the Bahamas.

He left with a US$1 million payoff and a firm grasp on No. 4 in the world the rest of the year.

"I guess I've got to thank Jason Day for backing out. I have to thank the US government and passport office for getting Dakota a passport so we could be here," Watson said. "For us, it's a good ride, a fun ride."

Even if it didn't feel easy to him, it sure looked that way.

Watson didn't make a bogey all weekend until the final hole, when he jokingly asked NBC field reporter Notah Begay how many shots he needed to win. He played it safe and made bogey, and all that cost him was the tournament record. Watson finished at 25-under 263, one shot from Jordan Spieth's record last year at Isleworth.

Reed also had a 66 to finish alone in second, moving him to No. 10 in the world for the first time. Rickie Fowler had a 64 to finish third.

Spieth tried to stay in range and was three shots behind until he missed a 4-foot birdie putt on the ninth hole and never converted many chances after that. He ended his year with a 67, and walking up the 18th, he and caddie Michael Greller allowed for a quick reflection.

Local coaches getting upgrade at Japanese clinic

Sangkhomsay Bubphanouvong

More than 30 Lao coaches from various Vientiane clubs will be able to better instruct young footballers following a coaching seminar being delivered by the Japan Football Association from December 8-9.

Many Lao coaches are getting B and C level licenses from the Asian Football Confederation. The coaches are studying to develop their practical and theoretical knowledge under Japan Football Association representative Mr Shigeo Yamazaki.

The coaching seminar is supported by Japan International Cooperation Agency (JICA).

The opening ceremony of the seminar was attended by Lao Football Federation's Vice President Mr Pasith Souphab and a senior official from JICA Mr Kimura Hironori.

The seminar is also helping commemorate the 60th anniversary of Laos-Japan diplomatic relations and 50th anniversary of JICA volunteers coming to Laos. Currently, JICA sends more than 800 Japanese volunteers to assist in many development areas such as sport, education, agriculture, society and other organisations in Laos.

Mr Pasith said the Lao Football Federation was happy to have the cooperation of the Japan Football Association and the local coaches were keen to take away important lessons from the coaching seminar.

This event is the first of its kind following the strategic alliance agreement with JICA, Japan Football Federation and the J-League.

JICA selected football as the sport to build good relations with the hope that Lao coaches will be able to further develop the local game.

Mr Shigeo said the Japan Football Association had been able to develop its footballers to a skilful level, and at the same time, is able to exchange ideas with Lao coaches.

"During the seminar, we are able to show training methods and also the playing system of Japanese football teams and we would like to see Lao coaches be able to train local footballers to be as skilful as Japanese footballers," Mr Shigeo said.
